Museum in Mewar

Mewar is bestowed with rich historical and cultural tradition in the term of both tangible and intangible heritage. Maharanas of Mewar always expressed a great interest in culture, heritage and history. They know and understand the importance of culture and heritage and about preserving and protecting them for generations.

In the late 19th century, Maharana Sajjan Singh (r. 1874 - 1884 CE) expressed an earnest desire to establish a museum at Udaipur. During his reign the artefacts related to regional archaeology, history, costumes and handicrafts etc. were collected for the museum. Before the formal establishment of museum Maharana Sajjan Singh also started the historical documentation for preserving the history and tradition of Mewar. He established the first history department in Mewar. Kaviraj Shyamaldas was the Head of this department and under whom the scholars of Hindi, Sanskrit, Urdu, Arabic, Persian and English were appointed for the documentation. Archaeological and historical documents were collected and compiled in different languages. Blue prints of inscriptions and copper plates were inscribed which were later on published in various books. In 1884, due to sad demise of the Maharana, his plan of establishing a museum could not take shape. The collections were stored in a small building at Sajjan Niwas Bagh (Gulab Bagh), Udaipur.

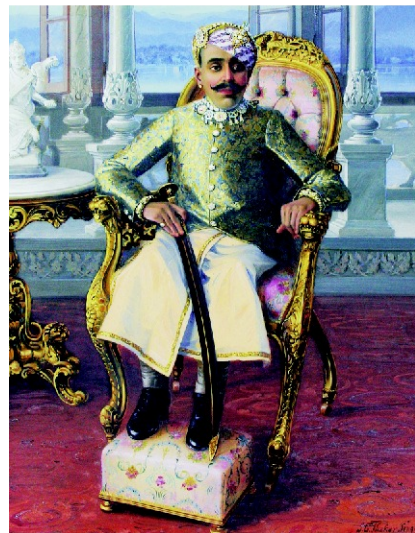

Maharana Sajjan Singh

Maharana Fateh Singh (r. 1884 - 1930 CE) started the construction of Victoria Hall at Sajjan Niwas Bagh and formally established a museum and library on the occasion of Queen Victoria's Golden Jubilee celebration on 20th June 1887. Museum had a large and rare collection of regional archaeology, history, costumes, handicrafts, miniature paintings, coins, sculptures, inscriptions (Second Century BCE to 17 Century), ornaments, arms & armour, musical instruments, copper plates and other objects. Maharana Fateh Singh appointed Shri Gaurishankar Hirachand Ojha as a first curator of this museum.

Maharana Fateh Singh

After the demise of Maharana Fateh Singh, Maharana Bhupal Singh (r. 1930-1955 CE) encouraged literary and scholarly practices. During his reign many scholars namely Pandit Akshay Kirti Vyas, Shri Ratan Chandra Agarwal worked on museums archives. They were also appointed as a curator and librarian of this Museum. Iconography, Epigraphy and Miniature were main attractions of this museum. After the independence Museum and Sajjan Niwas Bagh were acquired by the Govt. of Rajasthan and changed the name of the Museum to Pratap Museum, Udaipur.

Maharana Bhupal Singh

Maharana Bhagwat Singh Mewar of Udaipur (r. 1955 – 1984 CE) succeeded the throne of Mewar in 1955. In 1968 Pratap Museum was shifted from Sajjan Niwas Bagh to Hisab Daftar at The City Palace premises. After the independence Maharana Bhagwat Singh Mewar realized that it is necessary to have an organization for the preservation of the ancient Mewar heritage. He decided to turn Rajmahal into The City Palace Museum in 1969 under an institution Maharana of Mewar Charitable Foundation (MMCF). MMCF was founded by His late Highness Maharana Bhagwat Singh Mewar of Udaipur in October 1969 to continue with the traditional discharge of his duties and responsibilities as 'Maharana' in a changed democratic environment of Independent India and perpetuate the traditional functioning among the future generations for eternity. Initially only the Mardana Mahal was converted into a Museum and then The Zenana Mahal was incorporated in 1973. The Museum continued its journey without any further improvements till time Shriji Arvind Singh Mewar of Udaipur took over the museum in 1984 as Chairman and Managing Trustee of MMCF. MMCF serves as a 'temple of inspiration' for future generations and continues the model of self sustainability that is 'Eternal Mewar'.

Maharana Bhagwat Singh Mewar of Udaipur

Shriji Arvind Singh Mewar of Udaipur took tremendous interest in upgrading the Museum to world class level by engaging consultants in various fields. This resulted in placing of objects in proper museology terms. First of all the Zenana Mahal was restored and conserved to establish various galleries like Amar Mahal Gallery: Splendour of Silver - Reflecting the finest of silver smithy; Bhagwat Prakash Gallery: Mewar Miniature Painting Exhibition; Jas Prakash Gallery: Architecture and Conservation Exhibition; Basant Prakash Gallery: Life in Zenana Exhibition; Saraswati Vilas Gallery: Symphony of Mewar - A Royal Collection of Musical Instruments; Fateh Niwas Gallery: Photography Exhibition; Som Niwas Gallery: Divine Gesture - The magnificence of Mewar spirituality; Gokul Niwas Gallery: The Curtain Raiser - The Mewar Regalia, Textiles and Costumes Exhibition; Raj Niwas Gallery: The Regal mode of Transport- Tam Jaam and Palanquin Exhibition. Salehkhana Gallery: Arms and Armoury Exhibition is in process.

Shriji Arvind Singh Mewar also started the Eternal Mewar festivals namely the Holika Dahan, the Ashwa Poojan and the Kartik Poornima according to ancient Mewar traditions. He said "this museum is a living museum and not a dead edifice". Shriji focused on the challenges that Udaipur will have to face in the future. "I am now concentrating my thoughts on developing a model which will protect the tangible and intangible Living Heritage of Mewar and will also be a practical model of sustainable development." Shriji feels that in contemporary times, we should move away from a singular cultural identification and our endeavour should not identify the city with any one particular monument, or any single concept and idea, however unique it may be."We envision Udaipur as a destination that is the embodiment of a living heritage that is sustaining the essence of the past, yet continually updating itself with modern elements" he says.

Shriji Arvind Singh Mewar of Udaipur

In present context Maharaj Kumar Sahib Lakshyaraj Singh Mewar of Udaipur, Trustee, MMCF is taking keen interest in upgrading the City Palace Museum. Under his guidance the foundation is organizing various cultural and academic activities, projects and events.
